PREPARATION.
PROVO, UTAH. FEBRUARY 2000

Once,
not so long ago,
I treasured these.

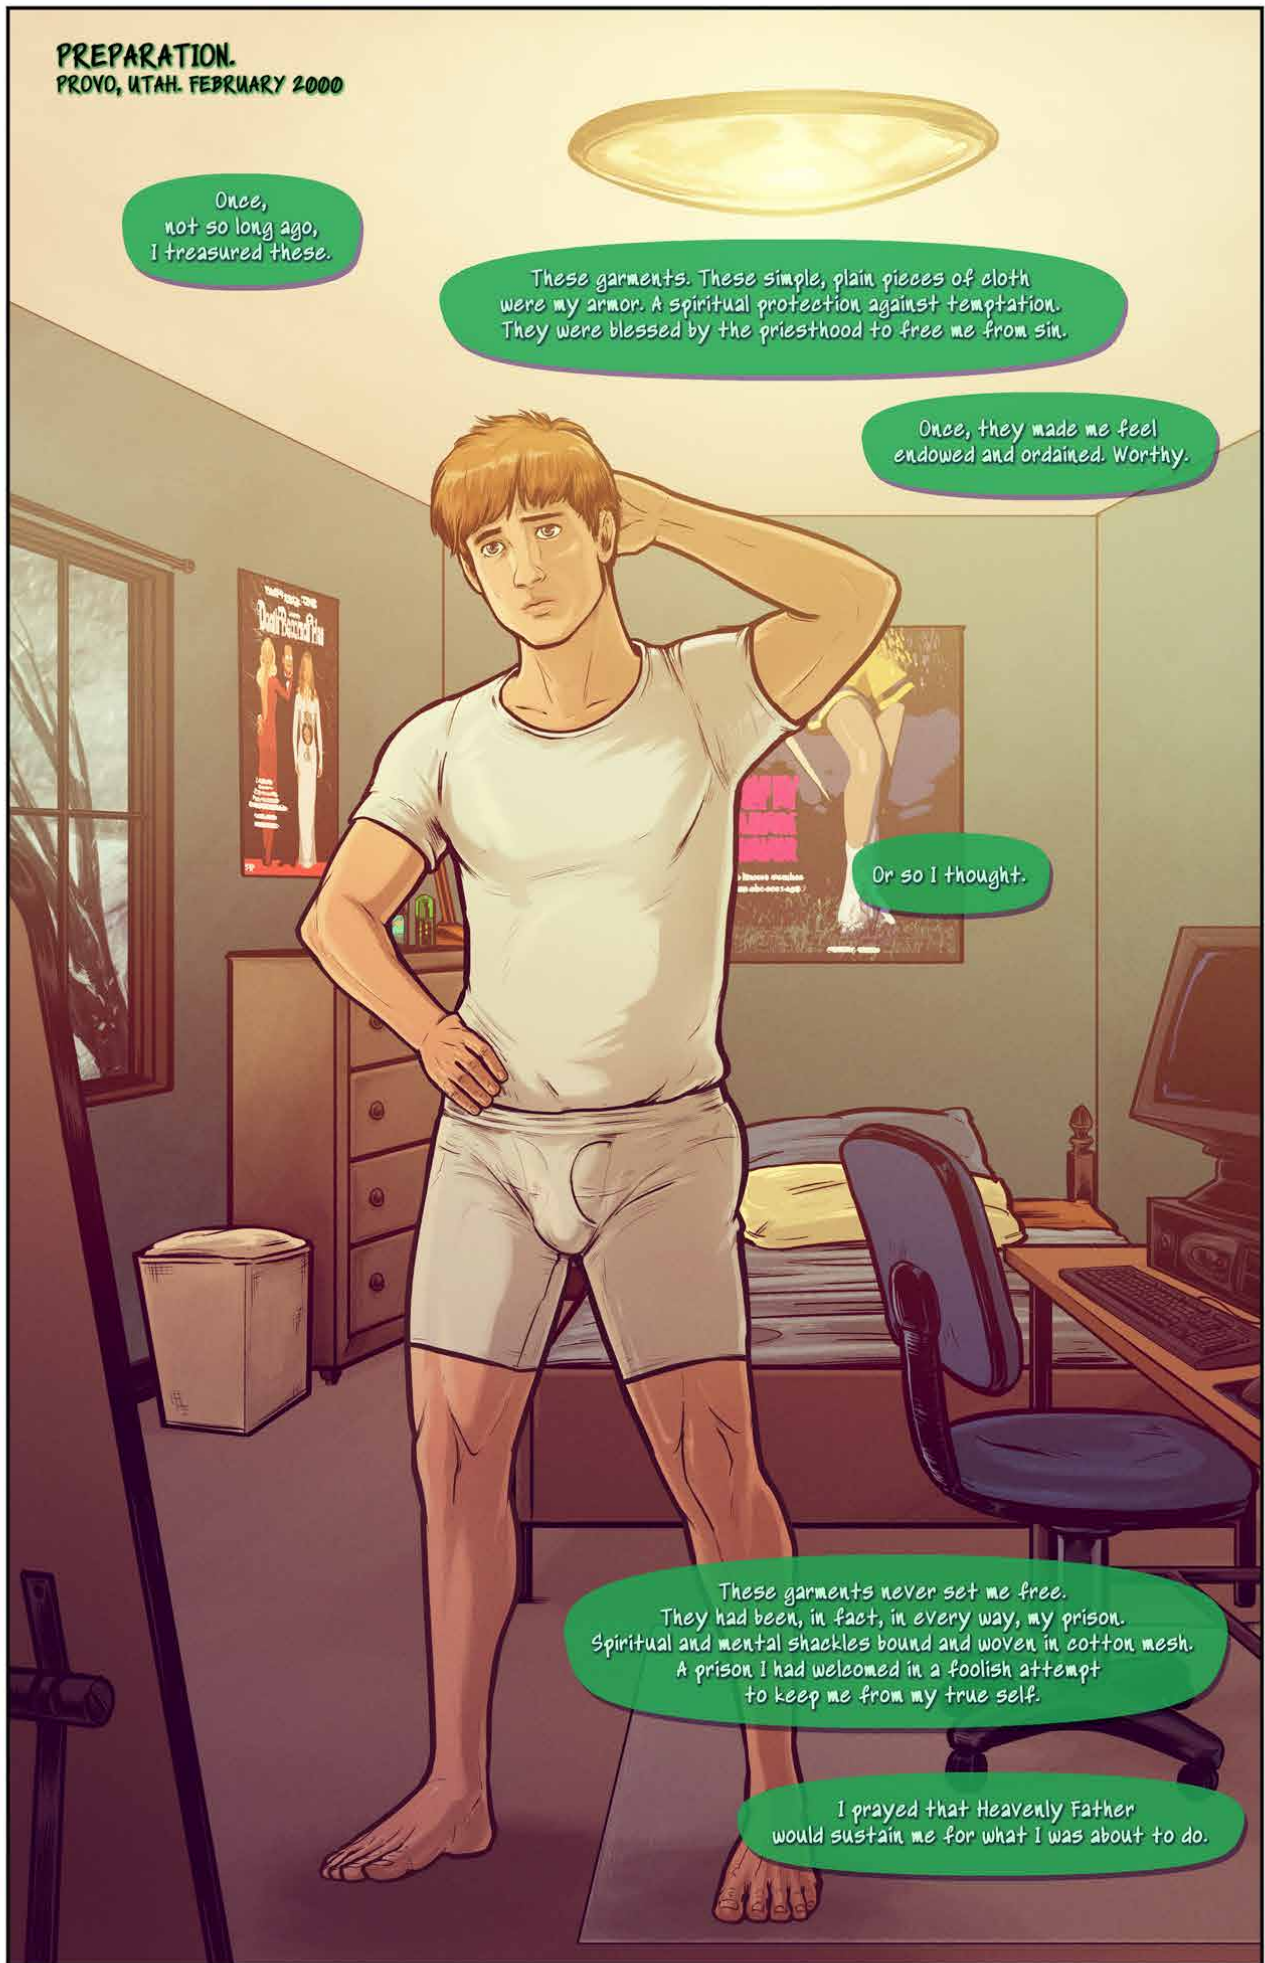

These garments. These simple, plain pieces of cloth were my armor. A spiritual protection against temptation.
They were blessed by the priesthood to free me from sin.

Once, they made me feel endowed and ordained. Worthy.

Or so I thought.

These garments never set me free.
They had been, in fact, in every way, my prison.
Spiritual and mental shackles bound and woven in cotton mesh.
A prison I had welcomed in a foolish attempt to keep me from my true self.

I prayed that Heavenly Father would sustain me for what I was about to do.

RELATIONSHIP OF TRUST.
LATER THAT EVENING. PROVO, UTAH. FEBRUARY 2000

I was awakened.
Suddenly, frighteningly, excitedly, I was new.

Caressing him became, in that moment,
my new gospel. My truth.

I burned and pulsed and hungered and yearned for every inch of him.

What do we have here?

That? That's my highlighter.

Oh? You planning on doing some studying?

My desire was palpable. I wondered if he could taste my lust in my saliva as we kissed.

What color is this highlighter of yours?

Well, I hope not,
but if I need to.... I am a Boy Scout, after all,
and a Boy Scout is always prepared.
